RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Understanding the Perceptions, Causes, Consequences, and Solutions to Gender-Based Violence Among Kenyans

Co-Principal Investigator

Spring 2013-present

This study explores survivor and community perceptions of Gender-Based Violence (GBV) and ways to address it in Kenya and among Kenya immigrant communities in the U.S. Data is being collected via focus group discussions with GBV survivors, adult community members, youth and service providers in urban and rural areas of Kenya and metropolitan areas of the U.S.

Principal Investigator: Dr. Oliver J. Williams

Examining Dating Violence Among Sexual Minority Youth, University of Massachusetts Amherst, School of Public Health and Health Sciences

Principal Investigator

Summer 2008 – Spring 2010

A study exploring the issue of dating violence among sexual minority youth and its relationship to physical and mental health outcomes. This study also explored the potential relationship between experiencing dating violence as an adolescent and experiencing dating violence in college. Data collection occurred by means of both focus groups and survey questionnaires.

Phone Intervention to Increase Safety in Abused Women, Johns Hopkins University, School of Nursing

Co-Principal Investigator

Fall 2005 – Fall 2007

Pilot study of a telephone intervention designed to increase safety of abused women identified via screening in an urban primary health care setting. This study was funded by the Center for Collaborative Intervention Research, an NIH funded research center.

Principal Investigator: Dr. A. Nancy Woods

Evaluation of an Intimate Partner Violence Intervention, Johns Hopkins University, School of Medicine

Lead Interventionist

Fall 2004 – Spring 2006

Worked on an evaluation of a screening and intervention protocol for abused women in urban OB/GYN and primary care settings comparing intervention sites with “usual care” clinic sites in the same city. As part of this CDC funded (S1751-21/21) research team my duties include providing direct intervention services to women who have experienced domestic violence, designing and implementing a qualitative component to the intervention design, overseeing staff, and participating in principle investigator meetings.

Principal Investigator: Dr. Daniel Ford

Schizophrenics Anonymous Forensic Project - Psychology Department, Michigan State University

Research Assistant

Summer 2003 – Sum 2004

Assisted in the evaluation of the Schizophrenics Anonymous self-help groups’ expansion into the state of Michigan’s Prison System. Duties included conducting qualitative interviews, group observations, qualitative analysis of interview transcripts and content analysis of archival data.

Principal Investigator: Dr. Deborah Salem

Resilient Child Study - Psychology Department, Michigan State University

Research Assistant, Data Analyst, and Instructor

Spring 1999 – Spring 2004

As part of this NIH (RO1 MH57267) funded research study I trained and supervised undergraduates to be advocates for women in the community who had experienced domestic violence and their children, assisted with instrument development, trained and supervised undergraduates to interview participants in order to measure the impact of the advocacy program on their psychological well-being and other dimensions. I also conducted structured interviews with project participants, coordinated interview and retention process, and cleaned and scaled interview data.

Principal Investigator: Dr. Cris Sullivan

Needs Assessment of African American Survivors – Psychology Department, Michigan State University

Fall 2000 – Fall 2002

Conducted focus groups and individual qualitative interviews with African American female survivors of intimate partner violence and African American service providers who serve predominately African American survivors in mid and southeast Michigan. Analyzed focus group and interview data.

Community Assessments – IDVAAC, University of Minnesota

Research Assistant

Winter 2000 & Summer 2001

Assisted the Institute on Domestic Violence in the African American Community to conduct community assessments by use of focus groups in Seattle, WA and Memphis, TN. Assisted with audiotaping and note-taking.

Principal Investigator: Dr. Oliver Williams
